The Greater Providence Board of REALTORS® has announced a Diversity Scholarship program for minorities and members of other underrepresented communities looking to enter or further their careers in the real estate field. The scholarship program is intended to increase diversity and representation in real estate to help all members of the Greater Providence community attain the dream of homeownership, especially those from historically underserved communities.

Scholarships will be awarded on rolling basis through November 15, 2021, in increments up to $1,500 per person subject to selection by the Board and availability of funds. The scholarships can be applied towards payment on sales pre-licensing course registration fees offered through the Greater Providence Board of REALTORS® or offered by the Rhode Island Association of REALTORS®. Applicants must be affiliated with a REALTOR®-brokerage in Rhode Island to be eligible, as well as meeting other basic requirements.

“The events of the past year plus have shown the importance of and critical need for increased diversity in the real estate field.” says Michael Pereira, 2021 President of the Greater Providence Board of REALTORS®. “Discrimination, such as the overt and subtle steering discovered during the Newsday investigations on Long Island and other cases across the country, are a sad reminder that discrimination and unequal treatment are still realities in our field. By making our field more diverse and bringing more perspectives and life experiences to the table, the Greater Providence Board of REALTORS® hopes to make buying, selling or renting a home a more fair, equitable and inclusive process for all.”
